SPECIAL ELECTION.

Fifth Representative District.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 4, 1894.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For Representative to the Legislative Assembly.

WILLIAM C. HALL.

What a falsehood it is which Republicans tell when they say that Utah sugar was sold two cents a pound cheaper because of the bounty. Utah sugar was sold in the market at just the same price as other sugar and had the extra protection of the freight tariff. The Utah taxpayer did not receive a cent's return in his sugar purchases for the bounty paid out of his taxes.

The Provo Dispatch cannot let the Peay case alone, and will not withdraw its false insinuations against The Herald. Nor will it say that the Peay land is or ever was of value anywhere like the amount assessed by the jury as damages to that land. The Dispatch, after contending that the verdict of the jury must not be criticized, declares it was a outrageous verdict and admits that the Utah county men on the jury were for lower damages. How could it be an exactly just and proper verdict when it was not given on principle but on compromise? The value of land adjoining is not the value of the Peay land. Charging The Herald with taking up this matter because of the ownership of stock in the canal companies by some stockholder in The Herald, which was totally false and unwarranted by anything The Dispatch has been able to say, was the main cause of The Herald's reply, and that charge has never been withdrawn, or apologized for. The Dispatch went off wrong in its beginning and seems determined to remain in the wrong to the end.

"PROTECTION" DIVIDENDS.

While no one denies that there has been a great deal of distress during the past year all over the civilized world, and that this country has had its share of trouble, at the same time it must be evident to the thoughtful observer of current events, that there has been also a great deal of political humbug in exaggerating the evils existing, and predicting others that may never come.

It is also very certain that advantages have been taken of the general depression to cut wages, bear down prices, and make great pretenses for the purpose of securing the public against the party in power, and at the same time reaping profits from the cutting of prices and the reduction of wages where it has been possible.

And, in spite of the "hard times," it is a fact that many of the corporations of the country have made good dividends such as in the old world would be thought very favorable even in the best of business years. The following from the New York World gives a number of cases in point.

It is a hard year for manufacturers. There has been a panic, a great locking up of money and a time of general and severe economy on the part of consumers, yet the business just issued at Fall River setting forth the operations of thirty-four corporations there shows that they have paid this year average dividends of 7.5 per cent. on their annual capital, which is much greater than their actual investment capital. It is a fact that these "infant industries" cannot survive any reduction in the "cost of government" pay given to them through high tariff schedules. The American people are manifestly very anxious in making to be relieved from any part of the tax they pay to such with money dividends as these, which in a few years will fall a little below 3 per cent. on the watered capital of the mills.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Good morning, and a Happy New Year! We believe eighteen hundred and ninety-four will be better in every way than its immediate predecessor. Through a combination of circumstances and a culmination of causes, the year that has passed was fruitful in distress and disaster. Panic, depression, catastrophes of various kinds, accidents by land and sea, fire, flood, famine and disease, anarchy, murder and suicide all contributed to the year's afflictions and made it memorable in the annals of the century as a period of more than ordinary calamity. Thank God the year is past and a new year opens with promise of better times.

There is no reason apparent why the monetary and business situation should not every day improve. We look for comparatively flush times with the spring. There will be an increase of the circulating medium, a rise in real estate, a gradual return of confidence, a prosperous summer, a good harvest, a brisk and lively fall, and the year will go out with merrier echoes and far greater satisfaction than the year that has just departed. That is simply The Herald's opinion, and our readers can take it for what it is worth.

We hope that before the year closes Utah will be endowed with all the rights and privileges of sovereign states. That will not only place upon her greater responsibilities, entailing perhaps larger expenses, but will bring to her increased capital, extensive investments, more rapid developments and growth in all material interests.

We extend congratulations to the people of this territory on the manner in which they have aided over the sea of troubles that threatened to overwhelm them during the months that have gone. On the calmness and peace that prevailed among them when fear and panic ran riot throughout the land. On the grand efforts put forth in behalf of the poor and distressed. On the triumph of the better elements of society which has taken place. On the union that has brought together former contending factions, and the disposition which has grown up to cast aside the bitterness which once soured men's hearts, and the desire to understand each other better, in acknowledge the good intention with which differing parties are animated, and to work together for the common welfare.

For the reason that this spirit of unity has entered the hearts of the people, if for no other, there is reason to look for greater prosperity and better times in the new year than prevailed in the old. And The Herald reaches out its hand in cordial salutation to all Utah, desiring its happiness and progress, and wishes its people and all who seek to promote the good of the race a blessed and happy New Year.

COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY.

The university question is still under agitation. Professor J. T. Kingsbury has compiled a pamphlet giving the views of some of the most noted educators of the land on the error of attempting to keep up two or more separate institutions wherein many of the studies of one are duplicated in the other.

The letters published in this pamphlet are all in favor of the establishment in each state, of one University, with a department of agriculture but not a separate college for its promotion. The foremost educational institutions of the country appear to be unanimous in this. Many of the communications were addressed to the state couple of education in Montana, but apply directly and equally to the Territory of Utah.

It may be objected to this that Utah is exceptional in that it has already an agricultural college, well equipped and on which large amounts of money have been expended, and that the cases mentioned in the pamphlet are states where that has not been done. After that there is no instance among them where an agricultural college has been established and then blended with the University.

That may be true and yet be no answer to the very general opinion strongly maintained and vigorously put, that the University should be one and embrace both the Agricultural department and the school of mines and be under one general faculty. Prof. Kingsbury puts this question very clearly.

We think he asks out his case. He shows that the union of these two institutions will prevent the present unnecessary duplication of studies, teachers, and classes, of libraries, museums, and laboratories; of tools, apparatus, workshops, and buildings; of the work of superintendence, clerical work, advertising, printing, trustees' work, etc.; thus making one great territorial institution of which the people might well be proud, instead of two lesser affairs, as at present, each with a somewhat precarious future, on account of the division of appropriations between them.

The union would save perhaps fifty thousand dollars a year to this territory, in the work of regular instruction alone, by saving nothing of the immense savings represented by avoiding the duplication of the expensive items above enumerated.

The union would place a university education within the reach of the youth of this territory without leaving Utah to obtain it. The leading educators of Europe and America favor division for primary and secondary schools, but concentration of all available resources for university work.

Extracts from some of the opinions of our great educators as collected by Prof. Kingsbury in his pamphlet, are as follows:

Professor Kellogg, University of Cal.

born, says he "believes it to be decidedly beneficial to everybody concerned to have the several departments of higher instruction in one town and under one administrative board. The experience of the University of California confirms this view."

President Northrop, University of Minnesota: "In Minnesota the College of Agriculture is combined with the University. The result is most satisfactory."

President Schaeffer, University of Iowa: "I sincerely trust that the people of Utah will be satisfied with one institution and will give that one a liberal and generous support."

President Low, Columbia College, N. Y.: "I venture to say that for the best result will be reached in the long run, if the higher educational forces of your Territory (Utah) can be concentrated in one town. There would be an immense saving. * * * One department inspires another. * * * Without a dissenting voice we have chosen the policy of concentration."

President Gilman, Leland Stanford, Jr. University: "I congratulate the state of Illinois that its University is one University, that its pure and applied science, its literature, history, philosophy, and art are taught in one institution by one united faculty."

"It is the interest of the state to concentrate these institutions at one spot under one direction."

President Gilman, Leland Stanford, Jr. University: "I am firmly of the opinion that it is desirable to combine in one great institution the State University and the College of Agriculture and mines, provided for in the Congressional grant."

President Harper, University of Chicago: "We have no hesitation in saying that it will be a great calamity to the cause of education, not only in your state (Montana) but elsewhere, if the institutions which are to be established are separated from each other."

Letters exactly similar to those quoted from above have been received from William T. Harris, United States commissioner of education; James H. Canfield, president University of Nebraska; J. T. Burrill, president University of Illinois; W. H. Payne, president University of Nashville; Charles F. Thwing, president Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio; Francis Walker, president Massachusetts Institute of Technology; William M. Thornton, president University of Virginia; S. A. Jones, president University of Nevada; James B. Angell, president University of Michigan; R. H. Jesse, president University of Missouri; R. B. Fulton, chancellor University of Mississippi; Joseph Swan, president University of Indiana, and from many others. There appears to be no dissenting voice as to the desirability of the union of our higher educational facilities.

A brief survey of the catalogue of the university and of the agricultural college further sustains the proposition for union. Following are the chief studies taught in these two institutions:

1. Studies taught in both the agricultural college and the university: rhetoric, literature, elementary elocution, military drill, physical culture, elocution, free-hand drawing, United States history, higher algebra, trigonometry, surveying, descriptive geometry, general history, physics, trigonometry, geometry, solid geometry, advanced surveying, physical laboratory, painting, music, drawing, anatomy, physiology, advanced physiology, hygiene, botany, advanced botany, civil government, psychology, political economy, German, French, Spanish, astronomy, logic, Shakespeare, literature, (advanced) mineralogy, lithology, geology, drawing (three years), chemistry (three years), analytical mechanics, analytical geometry, calculus.

We are of the opinion that there should be one university and that the Agricultural College should be one of its departments. And it looks as though the question should receive immediate attention from the fact that appropriations will have to be made to support those institutions. In determining the amounts the probability of the union of the two should be considered. But with the prospect of statehood imminent we think the money expended on either should not be in excess of immediate actual necessities.

Before that matter is decided it would be wise to examine the sites and buildings occupied by the University and the College with the purpose of ascertaining which would be the better adapted, all things considered, for the location of the future great University of Utah. And it must not be forgotten that, first, the ground and buildings in Logan are splendid and ample and, second, that in the event of making them the place for the University, the land and buildings in this city would revert to the municipal corporation.

FOOT BALL TODAY.

THERE WILL BE A BIG GAME AT THE EXPOSITION GROUNDS.

Company G and the First Battalion Will Wage Friendly War—Both Teams in Good Fighting Condition.

The foot ball game today at the exposition grounds between Company G and the First Battalion from Fort Douglas will attract a large crowd, and unless the game proves a tie there will be eleven sore heads and eleven heavy hearts on one of the post teams tomorrow night.

The soldiers have been so successful this year that neither of the heavy-weight teams is willing to come out second best.

There is but twenty pounds difference in the aggregate weight of the two teams. Including substitutes the difference is greater, in favor of the First Battalion, as Company G has three light substitutes.

The Y. M. C. A. team generously loan some of their suits to the soldiers. The best of feeling exists between them and the Fort Douglas players, and a match between them is a possibility.

Corporal Morrow had to retire from the captaincy of the Second Battalion team, as he was hurt in the groin while playing the association game at All Hallows' college. There is no better, no more popular player at the post. He will manage both teams today.

Two soldiers were sent to the hospital and Lieutenant Woodward's nose was broken in the game played November 4 at Fort Douglas. These they consider the unavoidable incidents of the game. No complaints of stinging were made.

Indeed, a careful census of bruises received this year in Salt Lake will find as many victims on the hill as in the city.

Company's mascot dog, dressed in proper colors, will attend the game; and it is supposed the First Battalion will bring as good a dog to fight for them.

ENTERTAINMENT AT SUGAR HOUSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Pitts Give a Pleasant Party Saturday.

To the Editor of The Herald.

Sugar House, Dec. 31.—Sugar House proper is not as yet within the limits of Salt Lake, though a consummation devoutly to be wished, but it is so situated near to occasionally partake somewhat of the airs of our more wealthy Salt Lake uncles and aunts.

At a nice dinner last night at the family residence of our genial friends Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pitt, it is not necessary here to give the names of the guests, as they are all well known to the community. It is sufficient to say, that the elite of Sugar House was present, neatly and warmly clad. One of the most pleasing features of the evening was the honored presence of two of the original pioneers into the Salt Lake valley, 1847, W. C. A. Smith, Sr., and Charles E. Rorer, whose rugged forms and happy faces added much to the enjoyment of the evening, and little beside of the hardships which they passed through in the early days.

After a sumptuous spread, at which all seemed to make themselves at home, music, song and cards followed until early morn.

HEALTH GIVING.

What the World's Fair Committee Says of Idaho Water.

Among the exhibits at the World's fair which were entered into competition were the natural mineral waters of the country and necessary to the west was in it to a large extent. Among the competitors was the Idaho springs of Idaho and the property received the first prize. As the springs are largely owned by Idaho people the award of the committee which is as follows, will be of interest.

Consists of samples of natural mineral water representing Soda Springs, Hamock county, Idaho.

The springs are mentioned in the early geological examination under General John C. Fremont and the locality has been known as a health resort for the past thirty years.

The bottling and sale of this water has become one of the chief industries of the country. The water possesses the happy quality of blending with wine and liquors without giving discoloration or precipitation. It is pleasing to the taste, healthful and exercises a mild medical effect.

Sworn statements duly acknowledged accompanying the exhibit showing that the water is bottled just as it flows from the springs with its own excess of natural carbonic acid gas.

The accompanying analysis made under the supervision of Professor C. P. Chandler, M. D., the well known analyst:

We recommend an award for palatability, natural effervescence, purity, large amount of carbonic acid gas, healthfulness and the natural being properties which constitute Idahoan, an unsurpassed sparkling delicious table water. COMMITTEE ON AWARDS.
